Human Trafficking Search (HTS) <http://humantraffickingsearch.net/>

HTS is the global resource and research database on human trafficking. The database consists of academic journals, reports, research studies, congressional testimony, news articles, and other primary and secondary sources, carefully researched and curated by experts in the field. It is updated regularly and contains information in multiple languages, on 120 countries. The database is searchable by keyword, country, organization, and by theme.

First designed in 2006, HTS provides knowledge and information to service providers, advocates, law enforcement personnel, students, researchers, and anyone with an interest in this topic. In addition to the database, HTS offers background information, videos, a daily newsfeed, art, a weekly blog and more, all focused on human trafficking. HTS aims to increase public awareness and facilitate the elimination of human trafficking worldwide. HTS also publishes original research and timely analysis on current events and trends.

NEST: (National Educators to Stop Trafficking). Resources from Ann Oestreich, IHM

A clearinghouse for those looking to compare available prevention curriculum resources and learn how to get them in schools. NEST also serves as a place for prevention educators to connect, discuss best practices and provide support to one another. National coordinator: Tamara Honeycutt (360-281-7177); email tamara.ho...@gmail.com; website: www.nesteducators.org.

The NHTRC Student Toolkit (National Human Trafficking Resource Center) is designed to provide students with resources to identify and raise awareness of human trafficking in their community. Students can help promote the NHTRC hotline and prepare their campus and community to take a stand against human trafficking.

Anti-Trafficking Activist Toolkit is being tested by New York City High School students. The Toolkit educates young people about human trafficking and provides the knowledge and skills they need to educate their peers. Using a "learn and lead" approach, the project enables youth to take ownership of the project and empowers them to speak out about exploitation and about what young people can do in their own communities. <http://www.ecpatusa.org/home>
